BIRTH OF THE FILM :

The Film was the outcome of the pandemic that has blanketed the entire world.

During the lockdown, Rahul Roy observed the plight of the millions of migrant workers, and had the longing to bring their story to a larger audience.

Having collaborated with Neole Films on 'Death of an Ambassador' which is an English language political thriller filmed in Russia, Rahul instinctly knew they would be the right people to deal with the subject in an empathetic yet entertaining manner. He asked them to produce the film and roped in Nitin Kumar Gupta to work on the screenplay and direction, with Nivedita Basu adding her creative and production experience

It was decided to make the film as a dark comedy journey, dealing with the human story between a man and a child in an enjoyable way even as they faced the biggest crisis and hopelessness in their journey.

Rahul was not keen on playing the role of a migrant worker as he may not look convincing in the part, but a team of Russian prosthetic artists came up with a look that convinced him to play the lead part.

MAKING OF THE POSTER & TRAILER :

As the nation was in a lockdown, the pre-production, poster and trailer were completed with complete social distancing.

The script was written using the Hollywood staple Final Draft 11 software, which allowed realtime brainstorming and collaboration between the writers and director online.

A storyboard for the trailer was sketched by artist Alberto Verdejo from Chile. A mockup for the poster was done by designer Vitaly Pavlovsky from Ukraine.

The sketches and storyboard were sent to actors Rahul Roy, Arzan and Rupali in different parts of India. Each shot their parts and recorded their dialogs at their own homes using phone cameras.

The shots were rotoscoped by Neole Films Russia and composited over live action footage to create the stunning visuals of the poster and trailer. Rahul Roy and Arzan were shot separately, though in the trailer and posters they appear together in all the shots!

Lucian Marza from Romania composed the heart achingly epic score, and Tommy Lellos from Greece provided the moving voice overs.
